Fish and Game Bills.

A general game bill was passed, the essential features of which are: Non-residents of the state must carry away their game as open baggage and not concealed under cover. Persons shooting wild birds must not pluck the feathers or otherwise destroy their identity until they get home. Permits sneakboat shooting. Changes the open season for deer so as to make it between Oct. 15 and Nov. 30, a deer license, however, to be good for only 25 days in the 45. Another bill legalizes the killing of beaver the open season to be from Nov. 1 to April 15. There has been an all-the-year-round closed season for beaver and they are again quite plentiful, particularly in the upper peninsula. Rep. Baldwin's bill will give all rabbit hunters an equal show for the game by prohibiting hunting with ferrets and guinea pigs. To permit the spearing of cisco and carp in the inland lakes from Nov. 10 to 31, a license being necessary. To amend the general fish law so that carp can be taken by nets in Lake St. Clair under certain restrictions. To permit calico or strawberry and white to be taken all the year round.

MAY 16 THE DATE.

Trial of Bath Tub Makers Begins in Detroit Then.

At a recent conference in Grand Rapids Judge Denison set May 16 as the date for the trial of the 32 indicted members of the so-called bathtub trust. The trial will take place in the federal court room in Detroit. District Attorney Watson, Special Assistant Attorney-General Grosvenor, and Attorney Darling, of Washington, attended the conference for the government, and Attorney Leo M. Butzel, of Stevenson, Carpenter & Butzel, of Detroit, was present for the defense. The federal attorneys wanted the case set for trial on April 4, but Mr. Butzel insisted that the defense be given more time to prepare their case. For presentation in court and asked that the date be not earlier than May 15. Judge Denison agreed to allow the defense the time it considered essential and named May 16.

The postponement of the date to this time is considered a point for the defense. It is expected that the trial will consume several weeks.

"THE SHOP THAT KNOWS HOW"

AN OLD CLOTHES MAN'S STORY

By C. L. POINEER

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

I am an old clothes man. I buy old clothes from door to door, take them to my shop, repair them, press them and sell them for a good profit. But this is not all there is in the old clothes business. It is very easy for small colts, principally ten cent pieces, to slip through little holes, or, rather, rips, in a vest pocket. The first thing I do with the clothing I buy is to search the pockets.

But the most interesting things that get into old clothes are old letters. Few old clothes men pay any attention to them, burning them without reading them. I always read them. Possibly there may be something in them to render them valuable. I have found letters of this kind that would have paid me well were I disposed to levy blackmail, but I am not in that business.

I once bought a coat that had a letter in a side pocket sealed and with a stamp on it ready for mailing. The envelope was not soiled. The letter had evidently been placed in the pocket for delivery in the mail, forgotten, the coat hung up without being worn again and eventually sold to me without being examined by the seller.

I constituted myself a dead letter office, opened the envelope and read the letter. It was from a wife to her husband, offering to "make up" after a quarrel. She proved conclusively that he had been mistaken in the matter he had against her, vowed that she had always loved him and would never love any one else. She begged him for the sake of their children to come to her and be reconciled.

I wondered what had been the result of the failure to mail this letter. I became interested in the poor woman, who might have been suffering from some one's carelessness, as well as her husband and innocent children, for there is nothing more melancholy than the case of a child seeing its father and mother quarrel and finally separate. It appeared likely that the writer must have given it to the man who had worn the coat to mail and he had neglected to do so. I felt that I would like to wring his neck.

It occurred to me that, being an old clothes man, I had never had any opportunity to do any one a kindness. I couldn't give money, because I couldn't enough to keep the wolf from the door. If I gave to any one I took away from what my wife and children needed. So it occurred to me to find this couple between whom the letter should have passed and deliver it. Perhaps they did not need it; perhaps they had been reconciled in another way; perhaps they had been divorced and one or both married again. Then the remarriage of a parent always seems to me a far more terrible heritage to the children than the parent's death. The latter is an awful bereavement, but the former is a living horror. As the letter was but a year old I hoped that I would not be too late in delivering it to at least save the little ones from this last hopeless condition.

I didn't know how to go to work to find either of the parties, so I went to the postoffice and asked for advice. The interview resulted in my writing a note to the man whose letter I had, advising him of the fact that a letter that might be of importance to him had come into my possession. I addressed the note as the letter had been addressed, and the postoffice men agreed to deliver it if the man could be found.

Within a couple of weeks a gentleman came into my shop with my note in his hand, saying that he was the man to whom it was written.

"Have you a wife?" I asked.

"No," he answered bitterly.

"Are you divorced from a wife?"

"Yes."

"Are either you or your wife married again?"

"No."

I drew a sigh of relief and handed him his wife's letter written a year before. He seemed much affected, not speaking for some time after reading it, and I saw tears standing in his eyes. I was curious to know what feeling would be uppermost in his mind, for he would surely give expression to it. This is the first thing he said:

"I'll kill that infernal fellow if I hang for it!"

"What infernal fellow?"

"The stupid idiot that was given this letter to post."

He had his eyes on the letter, but at this point looked up at me and continued:

"And now, my good man, I wish to reimburse you for any expense you have incurred in this matter, besides giving you a suitable reward."

"There has been no expense. As to the reward, my pleasure in having done one act without pay in my contemptible life is a far greater reward than any you could offer. Let an old clothes man have this satisfaction. I beg of you. One thing I ask—let me see you remarried."

He went away, and the very next day sent me word to come to his house at 3 in the afternoon. I went there and was the only person present besides the couple and the man who married them.

When the ceremony was over a door was opened, and in ran a happy lot of children, who bounded into their father's and mother's arms.

And I—what a happy old clothes man was I!

Is Your Buggy Worn and Dingy?

Are you considering the purchase of a new buggy to take its place?

You don't buy a buggy every week, so when you do get one it will pay you to get a good one.

Do you find it hard to make a choice?

All look pretty much alike when they are new, don't they? Best way to do is to buy a buggy made by a firm you know never turns out anything but reliable goods.

If you buy a

...Save Your Orchards...

BY SPRAYING

Scale is a factor that nearly every farmer has to reckon with. When it has once infested trees in your orchard, if left alone it will never let up until it has killed every tree. The one sure way to control the scale is to spray while your trees are dormant.

Sherwin-Williams Lime-Sulphur Solution

protects your orchard from this pest. It is a clear liquid that will not crystallize and form particles that clog up the spray nozzle. If you have any scale in your orchard, come in and tell us and we will give you further information and instructions on how to spray.
